Fr. Marshall's Musings

I would like to thank all of those who so generously donated to our Easter collection this year. This is an important part of our budget and through your generosity, I think we will obtain our budgeted goal. I also thank you for being so hospitable to those who came to Mass on Easter weekend.

Last Sunday we heard the story of Thomas the doubter wanting to feel the hands and side of Jesus to be sure he had risen from the dead. Doubt is a daily part of our lives and seems that especially when things don't go our way or when things happen to us that are incomprehensible we doubt God's presence.

The only way to confront doubt is through maintaining a good relationship with the Risen Christ. This means that prayer has to be integral to who we are. I think in many ways the Monks have it right. We should be praying at the beginning and at the end of the day, before and after meals and at various times throughout the day to recognize God's presence.

We also know that God is with us because of our experience. Has there ever been a time in your life or mine when God has not been there for us? Maybe not in our way or in our timing, but in His way and in His timing. So let us look back over our shoulders and recognize how much God's presence is a part of who we are.

This Sunday's Gospel again gives us a story of how Jesus appeared to the disciples after the Resurrection. But again they were troubled, questions arose in their hearts. He invited them again to touch and see him and he showed them his hands and his side. Then he asked if they had anything to eat. Isn't it peculiar that when Jesus wants to prove his Resurrection, it always is around food.

This should give us an indication that when we eat with those we love, especially our family members, Christ becomes present. The last line of the Gospel for this Sunday is the most important, it says, "you are witnesses of all these things". What does it mean to be a witness of the Risen Christ in the world today?

To be a witness to the Risen Christ we must stand up against the lies that our culture imposes on us, that it is not an easiness of life or pleasure or power or prestige that one discovers the Risen Christ. For all of those things in and among themselves can be good, but if we think they are going to fulfill us, we are mistaken and disillusioned. The only way to find the Risen Christ is to look for signs of his presence in our daily lives. Those signs come to us mainly through those people whose lives are mingled with ours. So this week let's try to identify who reveals the Risen Christ to us. Is it our children, our parents, our spouse, our friends, our neighbors, our Church? When we open our eyes and see, we will know that Christ is with us for he loves us so much.

May the Easter Season, which we celebrate for the next 50 days, be a time of great spiritual enlightenment for all of us.

Fr. Patrick M. Marshall

(1) Memorial Tree

A healthy, new maple tree was planted last fall in the front lawn of the kindergarten with a memorial stone for Nancy Battle Scavuzzo. The yellow tulips represent Nancy's favorite color while the lone red tulip represents the red of the school mascot, the cardinal, and her phrase "It's a great day to be a cardinal."

(2) Arbor Day

National Arbor Day is celebrated the last Friday of April. Arbor Day is often celebrated with the planting of a new tree. The Village of La Grange Public Works donated a New Bradford Pear tree which was planted on the west side of the school grounds. This new addition brings the total number of trees on the parish grounds to 128.

A Mellow Heart in a Bitter Time

In her novel, A Good House, Bonnie Burnard tells the story of a relatively happy family. But even happy families have unhappy moments where bitterness chills an otherwise warm house.

She describes one such incident: A young couple, solid and trusting in their relationship, are having a rather intimate talk one afternoon when the woman's instincts tell her that her husband is hiding something from her, not necessarily at the level of infidelity, but something that he, for whatever reason, will not share with her.

Instantly a door begins to close inside of her, her warmth, and trust harden, and she feels the need to protect herself, assert some independence from her husband, and let him know that there are aspects of her life that he doesn't necessarily know about either. Their intimacy, so warm and trusting just minutes before, dissolves for a while into a certain coolness and distance. What's happened here?

What's happened is what happens to all of us, spontaneously and daily, in virtually all of our relationships, particularly with those with whom we are most intimate. Such is our emotional metaphysics, the way our hearts try to protect themselves: We tend spontaneously to replicate the energy we feel around us and feed it back in the same way as we feel it.

Quite simply, whenever we feel warmth, mellowness, vulnerability, transparency, generosity, trust, and big-heartedness in a relationship, we tend to respond in kind, with warm, mellow, vulnerable, transparent, generous trusting hearts. But the reverse is also true: When we feel coldness, bitterness, self-protection, jealousy, dishonesty, pettiness, or distrust, we tend to become cool, hard, self-protective, assertive, small-hearted, and distrustful.

It's not easy to do this. More than anything else, our hearts crave the warmth and trust of intimacy, but, precisely because these make us vulnerable, our hearts also tend to close doors rather quickly at the first signs of betrayal, distrust, or dishonesty.

Fear, especially, tends to do this to us. Most of our fears and anxieties arise out of a lack of confidence, from a poor self-image. Then, because we are insecure, we try to assert ourselves, to prove that we are loveable, attractive, talented, and worthwhile. When we are afraid, we can't risk vulnerability, instead we try to do things to show that we aren't weak or needy. But, to do this, we have to harden ourselves precisely against the type of vulnerability that invites others into our lives.

Jealousy, especially of a person we love, but whose love we can't have, also creates that same hardness in us. That's why we can be caught up in that strange anomaly where we are cold, distant, and perhaps even hostile, to a person whose love we badly want. Our coldness and feigned indifference towards that person is simply the heart's attempt to protect itself, to cope with an intimacy it can't have and the loss of self-esteem that comes with that.

The heart has it reasons, even for turning cold. Given the truth of this, what makes for a truly big heart is the strength to resist this emotional metaphysics and remain mellow, warm, trusting, and present to others in the face of bitterness, coldness, distrust, jealousy, and withdrawal. More than anything else, this is what defines a great lover.

This is perhaps the greatest moral challenge Jesus left us: We all do pretty well in love when the people we are loving are warm and gracious, but can we be gracious and mellow in the face of bitterness, jealousy, hatred and withdrawal? That's the litmus test of love. It's also one of the deeper invitations towards maturity. Everywhere in our world - in our most intimate relationships, in our families, in our workplaces, in our churches, and in society as a whole - we forever find ourselves in situations where we meet suspicion, jealousy, coldness, distrust, bitterness, and withdrawal. Our world is often a hard, rather than an intimate place.

The challenge is to offer a heart that creates a space for warmth, transparency, mellowness, vulnerability, and trust inside of hard places. The challenge is to offer our hearts as a space within which people can be honest, where nobody has to assert herself, where no games of pretense need be played, and where intimacy isn't held hostage to the momentary fears, jealousies, hurts, and emotional acting out that forever assail us.

And, the more bitter and the more emotionally trying the situation, the more this is needed. When times are bitter, angry, cold, full of disrespect, and fraught with jealousy, when it seems everyone is withdrawing into his or her own world, when most everything seems a lie, and when we are feeling most hurt, taken for granted, slighted, and marginalized, what's called for is not less, but more, attention to the quality of graciousness and warmth within our response. Bitter times call for, precisely, a deeper response of warmth, mellowness, transparency, truth, and compassion.

What's needed most in a bitter time is a mellow heart.
